Abbott & Costello Up In The Clouds For Latest Film

Abbott and Costello, who have tangled with the Invisible Man, Frankenstein, the Foreign Legion, the Army, the Navy, the wild West and the African jungle, get into a rip-snorting hassle with a man-eating giant in their latest picture, "Jack and the Beanstalk," an Exclusive Production in Super-cinecolor.

Bud and Lou, whose rollicking comedy specializes in the theme of getting into a lot of trouble and just barely getting out, stage their newest series of side-splitting antics high in the clouds, site of the giant's castle which they invade to rescue a captive prince and princess.

The durable comics, now in their 10th successful year on the screen, take larcenous and irreverent liberties with the ancient fairy tale of the boy who climbed a magic beanstalk to knock off a no-good giant.

James Alexander, singing star of "Oklahoma," and Shaye Cogan, former songstress with Vaughn Monroe, are the film's young lovers. Buddy Baer, prizefighter turned actor, plays the giant.

The Abbott and Costello comedy-fantasy is scheduled for release Easter week.

Rates With Santa

Doris Day rates with Santa Clause in popularity with the younger set. When meeting Doris on the set of "April in Paris" at Warner Bros., a 5-year-old visitor exclaimed, "I think you and Santa Claus are the two most wonderful people in the world."

Studio Exhausts Entire Stock Of American Flags

For the first time within the memory of the oldest veteran in Warner Bros.' property department, the studio's entire stock of American flags has been put to use for a single film scene.

Seventy-five red-white-and-blues were hung from the rafters of Stage 3 for a patriotic rodeo act in Madison Square Garden for "The Story of Will Rogers." In addition, 12 girl trick riders carried a flag pole each in the middle of the arena.

A. C. Wilson, head of the property department, said the last time he broke out most of the studio flag supply was for musical numbers in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," which used about 40 of them.

"The Story of Will Rogers," in Technicolor, stars Jane Wyman as Mrs. Rogers, with Will Jr. portraying his father. Michael Curtiz directs the film which is based on "Uncle Clem's Boy" by Betty Rogers. Robert Arthur produces for Warners.

Roland Preparing For Tennis Tourney

Gilbert Roland, currently starring at Warner Bros. in "The Miracle of Our Lady of Fatima," has started a strict exercise schedule to prepare for the Southern California Tennis Championships in May at the Los Angeles Tennis Club.

Although Roland, Hollywood's best tennis player, does road work, setting-up exercises and bag-punching, there's one form of exercise he's had to forego—his daily swim.

Swimming is bad for tennis players. It exercises the wrong muscles.

Cochran Debuts As Singer In Latest Film

For the first time in his movie career, Steve Cochran will sing on the screen.

The Warner Bros. star lifts his voice in song for "The Lion and The Horse," forthcoming outdoor action picture in Warner-Color.

The song he warbles is "The Rustler of Kanab," written by George O'Hanlon, the Joe McDoakes of the Warner comedy series, and fellow member of the cast which is headed by Cochran.

After the song was recorded and incorporated into the picture, Steve sent the following notes to Bing Crosby, Frank Sinatra, Gene Autry and others:

"Don't worry, boys, you have nothing to fear but fear itself."

Shortage Of Midgets Hits Movie Industry

Current shortage of midgets in Hollywood has put Billy Curtis on a bicycle. Lilliputian standin and actor is currently standing-in for 11-year-old Sammy Ogg in Warner Bros.' "The Miracle of Our Lady of Fatima," and for 9-year-old Michael Gainey, who plays Will Rogers Jr. as a boy in "The Story of Will Rogers" at the same studio.

Midget shortage is attributed to forthcoming spring resumption of circuses, carnivals and other outdoor attractions, as well as demand for little people to work in aircraft plants, where they are used for work inside bomber wings and other airplane sections too small for normal-sized persons to operate in.

Ruth Roman Plans Luau Celebration

Ruth Roman and her husband Mortimer Hall expect completion of the decorating and remodeling of their new Hollywood home shortly. Ruth, who recently completed a co-starring role with Errol Flynn in Warners' "Mara Maru," says she hopes to be hostess at her first big house-warming party.

It will be a Hawaiian luau party, the star adds, because it was last year while vacationing on the Islands that she met Jan Moran, the woman who decorated the home.

Film Director Makes Room For One More

Director John Brahm, currently directing "The Miracle of Our Lady of Fatima," has 20 rooms in his big house at Malibu, but doesn't think any one of them is right for a nursery for his newly-born daughter, Mara Lee. So he's adding a room to the house especially for the baby. The room will be equipped with a microphone system so that any unusual noise or crying by the infant can be heard by her parents anywhere in the house.

★ ★ ★

Ladd's First

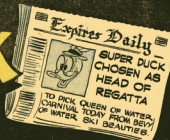

Alan Ladd's first starring vehicle at Warner Bros. under his new long-term contract will be "The Iron Mistress."

Ladd will portray James Bowie, colorful adventurer of the 1830's and developer of the bowie knife, much feared and respected by Indians and white men alike in the frontier fighting in Mississippi and Louisiana.

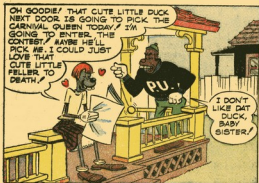

James Webb is writing the screen-play and Henry Blanke will produce for Warners.
